We are so excited for another summer in Medora. This year, something brand-new has us even more fired up than usual!

Point to Point Park will open this June, and that means you'll be able to go swimming, ride down a lazy river, and cool off at our splash pad this summer.

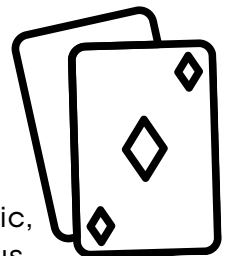

We asked Teddy Roosevelt to give us a little preview of the new park. Scan this code to watch the video!

WHAT ARE THE BADLANDS, ANYWAY?

If you've visited Medora, you know the colorful hills and mountains around town are amazing to look at! But how did the Badlands become the Badlands? We asked Geologist and Badlands Brainiac Kathy Neset — and she shared some mind-blowing facts:

- Rock layers started piling up in North Dakota 65 million years ago. Some of those rocks are ash from volcanic eruptions in the Rocky Mountains!
- When you see red rocks in the Badlands, it means coal caught fire underground and baked the rocks above it!
- After all those rocks were laid down, rivers (and very windy days!) started carrying away those huge piles of rocks. That process is called erosion. Over thousands of years, erosion caused the Badlands to form!
- Erosion is still happening today. That means the Badlands won't be around forever!
